Test 7

Read the following text and answer the questions.

(5 marks)

Being healthy is not just about what you eat, it is also about how you treat your body. Most people think being healthy is an expensive and difficult life style. It is really not much difficult or much more expensive than the way that most people live now. People are just reluctant to make changes in their lives. So they give excuses that hold people back from leading healthy lives.

One thing that can be done to lead a healthier life style is to change the way you eat. Everyone should eat plenty of fruits and vegetables, meat, whole grains and healthy oils and fat. Some people think fresh fruits, vegetables and meat are expensive. Sometimes it may be true but at many local markets you can get fruits and vegetables for a discounted price and usually they are pure and fresh as they come from a farmer in your own community.

Another important thing is exercising. It helps to maintain a healthy body and to keep the body in shape and youthful. You should exercise daily, even if it is just an hour.

1. What do most people think about being healthy?
2. Why do people give excuses to hold back from leading healthy lives?
.....
3. Where can you get pure and fresh fruits and vegetables for a discounted price?

Test 15

Read the paragraph and answer the questions given below.

(8 marks)

That summer I was fifteen and we went swimming every Sunday at the lake.

Timmy, my eight-year-old brother, would race me to the bathhouse where we changed into our suits. The rest of the family would go right to the beach. My mother watched over the younger kids, two little girls and the baby. She kept an eye on Cutie, our old mutt, too.

I was the only one who went swimming. My mother always warned me, "Be careful, Jill!" and I always answered, "Sure, sure!"

Then I would run off the pier and take a flying jump into the water. I spent my time playing around with the other kids there.

I had been diving all that day. After awhile I knew it was time to quit, or maybe even past time. But I kept on practicing the dive. Then Timmy came running out on the pier and yelled, "Jill! Come on! Dad's going to leave!"

The other kids laughed. I gave Timmy a dirty look. I wished he knew more than to talk to me like I was a kid. I took one more dive and swam in slowly.

When we reached the car, Dad said, "Well, you took your own sweet time, didn't you?" Because I knew he was right, I got into the back seat and angrily grabbed the door. I closed it with a loud slam.

There was a loud scream from my little sister Dilly. I turned around and stared at her. I couldn't believe what I saw. Her face was turning blood red, and her mouth was open as wide as it could be.

Out of thin air, my father gave me an angry look. I still didn't know what was wrong with everyone. Only then did he reach over behind me and open the door. It had caught Dilly's little fingers in a smashing trap.

Dilly kept screaming. Her face was now a horrible purple colour. My mother took Dilly on her lap and she kept saying nice things to her. I tried to shrink small, like a rat in a corner. Father wheeled the car around. Timmy yelled, "Dad, wait we forgot Cutie!"

Father shouted, "We can't wait." Then he drove off, leaving her, my dog for seven years, behind at the lake.
