I was boarded in the hostel during my school days. The great midnight parties we used to have are one of my happiest memories of hostel life. Our hostel warden, Mr Perera, was a strict disciplinarian and these parties had to be organized very carefully and skillfully. So each party was something of an adventure for us.

I remember one occasion particularly well. The new term had begun and, of course, a party was arranged. There was great excitement during the day and our teachers must have wondered what it was all about. There were no complaints over tea and boys accepted what was served.

Later that evening, punctual as ever, Mr Perera turned off lights at nine o'clock. We could be punished for talking after 'lights out', but it was difficult for us to keep quiet.

At about ten o'clock, Hasitha and Saman overcame their fears of Mr Perera. They crept over to the window and drew out the curtains slightly to see if Mr Perera's light had been turned off. It was still on and we waited eagerly for ages. We felt sorry to have given our hostel warden so much marking to do.

When his lights went out at last, we all jumped out of bed. Hasitha produced a wax candle which he set in the middle of the floor. In no time the place was covered with cakes, biscuits, fruit, nuts and gallons of soft drinks.

It must have been about one o'clock when some of us were falling asleep on the floor and only a hardy ones were still eating when Sisira dropped his mother's cake. There was a loud crash and, gathering up the remains of the party which were slipped under the bed-clothes, we retired to bed at once. It was a good thing we acted so rapidly, for a few minutes later the door opened and Mr Perera appeared – only to find twenty little boys sleeping gently.
